How to screw up an interview

We've all been interviewed for jobs. And, we've all spent most of those interviews thinking about what not to do. Don't bite your nails. Don't fidget. Don't interrupt. Don't belch. If we did any of the don'ts, we knew we'd disqualify ourselves instantly. But some job applicants go light years beyond this. We surveyed top personnel executives of 100 major American corporations and asked for stories of unusual behavior by job applicants. The lowlights:
"... stretched out on the floor to fill out the job application."

"She wore a Walkman and said she could listen to me and the music at the same time."
"A balding candidate abruptly excused himself. Returned to office a few minutes later, wearing a hairpiece."
"... asked to see interviewer's resume to see if the personnel executive was qualified to judge the candidate."
"... announced she hadn't had lunch and proceeded to eat a hamburger and french fries in the interviewer's office - wiping the ketchup on hersleeve"
"Stated that, if he were hired, he would demonstrate his loyalty by having the corporate logo tattooed on his forearm."

"Interrupted to phone his therapist for advice on answering specific interview questions."
"When I asked him about his hobbies, he stood up and started tap dancing around my office."
"At the end of the interview, while I stood there dumbstruck, went through my purse, took out a brush, brushed his hair, and left."
"... pulled out a Polaroid camera and snapped a flash picture of me. Said he collected photos of everyone who interviewed him."
"Said he wasn't interested because the position paid too much."
"During the interview, an alarm clock went off from the candidate's brief case. He took it out, shut it off, apologized and said he had to leave for another interview."
"Candidate said he really didn't want to get a job, but the unemployment office needed proof that he was looking for one."

"... asked who the lovely babe was, pointing to the picture on my desk. When I said it was my wife, he asked if she was home now and wanted my phone number. I called security."
"Pointing to a black case he carried into my office, he said that if he was not hired, the bomb would go off. Disbelieving, I began to state why he would never be hired and that I was going to call the police. He then reached down to the case, flipped a switch and ran. No one was injured, but I did need to get a new desk."

What to do if you are arrested or a search warrant is executed

The juvenile Services unit may be contacted immediately for some crimes and for other crimes you and your parents will simply sign a promise to appear and will meet with J.S.U. at a later date. (I.E., Shoplifting)

For adults: Remain calm and do not let your emotions get the better of you.

Being arrested is a very scary ordeal for those who have never been arrested. Adults as well as Juveniles, after being handcuffed will be patted down to make sure there are no weapons. I always asked the individual before I patted them down if they had anything that would stick me, poke me, or prod me. This is for Officer Safety. If you have something that could injure a Police Officer, now is the time to tell them.

Yes that could mean another charge, but it is better than getting someone hurt or taking it into the jail, which could add a Felony charge. If you are arrested you will be taken to the county jail where you will be booked in. You will be given an opportunity to make a phone call to let someone know you are in jail and why. Some use this to call a bail bondsman. For some crimes you will have to stay in the county until you go before a judge. (I.E., Domestic Violence, or most felonies).

What to do if the Police are executing a search warrant: Police are required to give knock notice on warrants unless there are exigent circumstances, those being; if the Officers articulate that knock notice could put Officers in danger, if it might permit escape by the suspects, or evidence could be destroyed. Most drug cases or violent crimes will be a no knock search warrant. If it is a no knock search warrant is executed you are going to be startled by the entry of the Police into your home. Do exactly as the Officers command. Most generally Officers are going to make everyone get on the ground with hands visible, and held there until the residence or whatever is being searched is secure. The occupants will probably be handcuffed and held in a secured area until the search warrant is completed. All occupants in the place where the search warrant is executed can lawfully be detained while the search is conducted. At Some Point after the residence is secured the home owner or occupant will be given a copy of the warrant. Showing the occupant the warrant immediately upon entry or before commencing the search is not constitutionally required.

If an Officer is on a call at a residence, let's say for a domestic disturbance, and while investigating this call he sees in plain view a large amount of narcotics, that Officer is going to secure and detain persons in the residence, while a search warrant is applied for. The chances of items being destroyed are probable if the Officers didn't secure and control the scene.

If any property is seized for evidence or forfeiture, some notice will be given to the owners of the property, so that the owner has the opportunity to pursue its return. This can be done through criminal or forfeiture hearings.

All Officers should conduct themselves in an Appropriate and respectful manner, but even if they don't, stay calm and respectful and this encounter will end much quicker. There are avenues to pursue with disrespectful Officers, as mentioned in the previous articles.

I am the Community Services Officer, Jeremy Busby. If you are in need of Child Safety Programs, Fraud Prevention programs, or would like us to set up an information booth at your community event, the programs are free and you can contact me at (918)423-9657 or jeremy.busby@cityofmcalester.com. If you have any information regarding a crime, contact the McAlester Police Departments Criminal Investigations Division at (918)421-4917 or Email Capt.Don.Hass@cityofmcalester.com.

You may remain anonymous. To report any other criminal activity, contact the McAlester Police Department at (918)423-1212 or if it is an Emergency dial 911.

Remember, the Officers don't know who or what they are dealing with so be Polite and Respectful and all will go well. Stay Safe and God Bless!

This week will be the third and final article in this series of: What to do when stopped by the Police. This week we will talk about what to do if you're arrested or a search warrant is being executed.

If you are under 18 and you have committed a crime and are arrested you can, and in most cases will be handcuffed. At some point your parent or guardian will be contacted, especially if you are being questioned while in custody.

Newfield 'STACKS' Chips in Oklahoma with Texas Portfolio Sale

Newfield Exploration Co. has pushed its Oklahoma's stacked reservoirs to the head of the line after making a deal to sell almost all of its Texas portfolio, including Eagle Ford Shale and conventional natural gas assets. The producer said Wednesday it has signed two separate sales agreements worth nearly $390 million total, catapulting "substantially" all of its Texas assets. The Eagle Ford properties are being sold to Protege LLC; the other buyer was not disclosed. The transaction, set to be completed before the end of September, is designed to cushion the balance sheet and free up capital to redeploy into the Sooner Trend of the Anadarko Basin, mostly in Canadian and Kingfisher counties, aka the STACK, CEO Lee K. Boothby said. "We continue to refine our portfolio and focus our people and capital resources on assets with high returns and a deep inventory of future drilling opportunities," he said. "Proceeds from the sale of our Texas assets will replenish our cash balance and position us for the timely acceleration of our STACK development in the future." Current production from the combined assets being sold is 12,700 boe/d net, 65% weighted to natural gas and liquids, 35% to oil. Newfield was one of the first operators to make a big bet in the various stacked reservoirs of Oklahoma's Anadarko Basin, and management has credited the strong well results as the primary reason for increasing full-year production guidance in June (see Shale Daily, June 22). On Tuesday Newfield boosted 2016 guidance yet again, with U.S. output now expected to be 53-54.5 million boe. Total company output guidance, which includes China operations, was raised to 58-59.5 million boe from 56-58 million boe. Part of the reason for the higher production estimates is the addition of 42,000 net acres acquired from Chesapeake Energy Corp. in May, which added 42,000 net acres in the basin's Meramec reservoir and lifted Newfield's position overall to 350,000-plus acres (see Shale Daily, May 5). Based on well performance to date, Newfield's average type curves in the STACK also have been raised by 15% to 1.1 million boe gross, Boothby said. "This increase is backed by the drilling of more than 100 wells to date -- the largest sample set in the industry," he said. "Our well results continue to improve as we optimize our completions and look for innovative ways to enhance returns in our upcoming full-field development campaign...We recently closed on our previously announced STACK acquisition and have allocated additional capital to these assets in the second half of this year. We remain excited about STACK and the play's potential to drive our growth in production and reserves for years to come." Newfield also issued 2Q2016 results Tuesday. The company, headquartered in The Woodlands north of Houston, recorded a quarterly net loss of $667 million (minus $3.36/share), which was better than year-ago losses of $992 million (minus $6.09). The latest losses including an asset impairment charge of $522

CVS drops Sanofi's diabetes drugs for biosimilars

U.S. pharmacy benefit manager CVS will drop Sanofi's main insulin drug Lantus from the list of medicines it reimburses on behalf of health insurers, dealing a blow to the French drugmaker's key diabetes business. CVS said it would switch instead to Ely Lilly's cheaper biosimilar drug Basaglar from 2017. Biosimilars are cheaper copies of protein-based biotech drugs such as Lantus, which are no longer protected by patents. They cannot be precisely replicated like conventional chemical drugs but have been shown to be equivalent in terms of efficacy and side effects. U.S. pharmacy benefit managers such as CVS help private-sector medical insurers negotiate better prices from drugmakers and also draw up so-called formularies, which are exclusive lists of drugs they reimburse for the insurers they work for.

CVS, which has nearly 80 million plan members, announced on Tuesday a number of changes to its formulary, saying they would lead to significant savings.

The company also said it would no longer reimburse Toujeo, Sanofi's next-generation diabetes drug. Sanofi shares were down 1.4 percent at 1250 GMT.

"Sanofi is disappointed by this decision. Healthcare professionals and patients should have a choice regarding their treatment," a spokesman for the French group said in an emailed statement.

"We will continue our ongoing discussions with other insurers," he said, adding CVS's announcement did not change the group's forecasts.

The patent on Lantus expired in 2015 in the United States, the world's largest drugs market, and Sanofi hopes to revive declining diabetes sales with Toujeo, launched in March 2015. Switzerland's Novartis and Actelion were also dealt blows by CVS's new formulary.

In a research note, Citi analysts said CVS's new formulary marked the "dawn of the biosimilar era".

Kepler Cheuvreux analyst David Evans said CVS's decision meant investors should brace for the pessimistic end of Sanofi's target range to limit the decline in diabetic drug sales to 4-8 percent per year until 2018.

Sanofi published lower second-quarter sales and profit last week, partly hurt by its diabetes division, whose sales were down 3.5 percent at constant exchange rates to 1.6 billion euros ($1.8 billion).

When asked at the time about the threat from biosimilars in the United States, Sanofi's head of diabetes Peter Guenter told investors that, given the number of Lantus patients, it was hard to imagine hundreds of thousands of patients being switched.

Pentagon says 33 U.S. military personnel infected with Zika

Thirty-three members of the U.S. military, including a pregnant woman, are believed to have contracted the mosquito-borne Zika virus overseas, the Pentagon said on Wednesday.

Air Force Major Ben Sakrisson, a Pentagon spokesman, said the U.S. service members are believed to have been infected outside the continental United States, but cautioned that it is hard to tell where exactly they may have contracted Zika. Florida authorities last week reported the first signs of local transmission of the virus in the continental United States in a Miami neighborhood.

The Zika outbreak was first detected last year in Brazil. U.S. health officials have concluded that Zika infections in pregnant women can cause microcephaly, a birth defect marked by small head size that can lead to severe developmental problems in babies.

Secretary Vilsack Announces $36.5 Million for Specialty Crop Research and Extension Investments

Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack today announced 19 grants totaling $36.5 million for research and extension to support American farmers growing fruits and vegetables, tree nuts, dried fruits, horticulture and nursery crops including floriculture. The grants are funded through the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) National Institute of Food and Agriculture (NIFA) Specialty Crop Research Initiative, authorized by the 2014 Farm Bill. "America's specialty crop farmers face many challenges ranging from a changing climate to increasing production costs. Investing in cutting edge research helps uncover solutions to keep their operations viable and ensures Americans have access to safe, affordable and diverse food options," said Vilsack. "The universities, state departments of agriculture and trade associations that partner with USDA address challenges at the national and local levels to help sustain all parts of America's food and agriculture system, whether the farms are small or large, conventional or organic." USDA's Specialty Crop Research Initiative (SCRI) develops and disseminates science-based tools to address the needs of specific crops. The funded projects address research and extension needs that span the entire spectrum of specialty crops production from researching plant genetics to improving crop characteristics; identifying and addressing threats from pests and diseases; improving production and profitability; developing new production innovations and technologies; and developing methods to respond to food safety hazards. Grants being announced today, by state, include: University of Arkansas at Pine Bluff, Pine Bluff, Ark., $50,000 The American Olive Oil Producers Association, Abstracts for this year's funded projects can be viewed on NIFA's reporting website. Scientists at USDA's Agricultural Research Service in Beltsville, Md., will use one of these grants to develop new mechanisms to improve food safety and prevent pathogen contamination of fresh and fresh-cut produce at retail. USDA consistently conducts and funds food safety research to generate real-world results for both government and the private sector. To date, NIFA has awarded almost $400 million through the SCRI program. Previously funded projects include a Virginia Polytechnic Institute project that will help producers reduce pathogens in their water recycling systems, and implement best irrigation practices for improving horticultural profits. A Michigan State University project is helping growers better manage pollinators such as native bee and honey bee populations to improve their specialty crop yields. SAFETY EXPERT, JOHN WALSH, PRESENTS

BACK TO SCHOOL SAFETY TIPS

- 1 Develop a family safety plan for emergencies that's easy to use and includes: designated meeting places outside of the house, emergency contact information and a first-aid kit.
- 2 Landmark your child's school route with a map - designate "safe zones" like schools, community centers and libraries where you know they can get help in an emergency.
- 3 Get to know the other children and parents in your neighborhood and make sure your kids use the "buddy system" when walking to and from school.
- 4 Reinforce "stranger danger" - Saying no to strangers or any adult who makes them feel scared or uncomfortable, and quickly getting away while yelling, "this is not my parent".
- 5 Consider personal safety products, designed to help keep your kids safe in the case of any uncertain or dangerous situations including:
• Getting lost • Threatening strangers • Allergic reactions or medical emergencies • Bullying

Working Cattle in Summertime Heat

Understanding and avoiding heat stress in cattle can be a valuable management tool for summertime in Oklahoma. According to the latest Oklahoma Climatological Survey most areas of Oklahoma have 10 or more days each year above 100 degrees and 70 or more days with high temperatures above 90 degrees Fahrenheit. This means that most cow/calf operations will be working cattle on days when heat stress to cattle is possible. Cattle have an upper critical temperature approximately 20 degrees cooler than humans. When humans are uncomfortable at 80 degrees and feel hot at 90 degrees, cattle may well be in the danger zone for extreme heat stress. Humidity is an additional stressor that intensifies the heat by making body heat dissipation more difficult.

The signs of overheating may develop suddenly and depend upon the environmental conditions and the health of the cattle exposed to the heat. Panting often occurs in overheated cattle along with other visible signs such as restlessness, excitement and spasms of certain muscles. A protruding tongue may be covered with saliva, and frothy mucus discharged at the nostrils.

Overheating in cattle can be prevented under most management conditions. If management practices calls for cattle to be gathered and put through a working chute for immunizations, implanting or other operations, then a few common sense rules should be followed.

- 1) During hot weather, cattle should be worked before 8:00 am, if possible. Certainly all cattle working must be complete by about 10:00am.
- 2) Cattle that must be handled during hot weather should spend less than 30 minutes in the working facility.

- 3) Make every effort to see that cool, fresh water is available to cattle in close confined areas for any length of time. During hot weather conditions cattle will drink more than 1% of their body weight per hour.
- 4) Shade and free air circulation should be provided if at all possible. For more information on heat management for cattle, contact your local OSU Extension Office President Obama issued a sweeping gun control measure by fiat. The U.S. State Department has labeled commercial gunsmiths as "manufacturers" for performing relatively simple work such as threading a barrel or fabricating a small custom part for an older firearm. As such they are required to register at significant expense or risk onerous criminal penalties, that is gun "control," not control over violence, mass shootings or terrorism.

her at the checkout counter was a young man holding a beautiful bouquet. Teasingly, she asked if they were for her and they shared a chuckle. Once he completed his transaction, though, he turned and handed her the 12 yellow roses, saying they were for her. Despite her protests, he insisted she take them. She very much wanted to give this young man a heartfelt thank you and let him know that he made a 90-year-old woman's week!

On July 21, a friend of mine was shopping in Walmart. In front of

I was so impressed with how McAester came together for the paper challenge! Goals were hit with extra paper to spare. When they say community spirit, they mean it.

Plato: "Let praise be given equally to women as well as men who have been distinguished in virtue." Go Hillary!

I couldn't believe a representative of the U.N. had the nerve to come to the United States and tell us how to handle demonstrators. Instead of demonstrators asking for a permit to demonstrate, we should just allow them to tell when they are going to demonstrate. He went on to tell law enforcement how they should respond to the demonstrators. I wonder if when he leaves the U.S. if he is going to Russia, China, North Korea, etc., to tell them how to handle requests for demonstrations. Of course, I understand why he thinks the U.N. can tell the U.S. how to treat demonstrators when they got President Obama to sign the Small Arms Treaty, which he will try to get through Congress in the lame duck session. The treaty contains all the things that they have been trying to do with gun control through Congress, and are going to use this as a back-door way to accomplish their goal. I just love the elite talking about gun control when they are surrounded by people with guns to protect them, some at taxpayer expense.

Dear family of mine, it would a most wonderful day to come home and see my family happy and ready to sit down together for dinner at the table without all of you hump necked because no conversation is happening! only the sound of dings, sighs and many other grunting noises as you all click away on your phones! Where did my family go? These robots are able to shovel it in without a sound other than the above mentioned due to their need to stay planted eyeballs on the cell phones. Here is the new rule. Hillary: "We got/get the change." Quarters dimes nickels, lot of times pennies. Some got U.S. indebted in trillions.

Yes, my comment is about the children that are still being murdered by their parents. I thought that after Ryan Luke's death some things would change. But we have more children abused, slammed up against the wall, drown as in this last instance. They are already working angles on the whys. These scumbags that have no regard for life that kill children, they have no life, they really don't. I just hope our DA and our judges will get a grip and understand what is happening in our community. As law enforcement
