Consumers Should Take Advantage Of Free Credit Reports

The Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (CFPB) found that many consumers are overwhelmed by the amount of information available to help them learn more about the financial services marketplace. At the same time, the CFPB found one of the most popular resources offered is information about credit reports.

done by VantageScore and the Consumer Federation of America, 37 percent of consumers have never obtained a copy of their credit report," he added. Consumers can get a free credit report from each of the three nationwide credit bureaus, Equifax, Experian and TransUnion, once a year by going to www.annualcreditreport.com. The process is easy and enables consumers to have real-time access to their credit reports. "Many people get annual medical checkups. We encourage consumers to be just as conscientious when it comes to their personal finances; get an annual credit checkup by obtaining your free credit report," added Pratt.

Clear Clutter Out of Your House and Relax

The mind is a terrible thing to clutter. But when you have a cluttered home, it's hard to de-stress and decompress. "Think about it," says Lisa Jacobs, a certified home organizer and the founder of Imagine It Done, a lifestyle consultancy in Roslyn, N.Y. "When you get up in the morning, if you have clutter right there in your face, it starts your day off on the wrong foot. When you have to start your day by looking for your keys or your phone or your toothbrush, it makes you anxious and you haven't even left the house yet!" If you think you don't have time to clear your clutter, think again. With an action plan from experts, you can bust the clutter in your home in 15-minute chunks every day -- and build yourself an oasis of calm that's also less of a haven for dust, dirt, and allergens. Before you de-clutter any space, prepare. You need bags or boxes for four purposes, says Ellen Delap, a professional organizer in Houston: Things you will donate to charity

Things you want to sell at a yard sale, or on Craigslist, Ebay, or freecycle
 Things that belong in another room
 Things headed for the trash
 Now you're ready to de-clutter any room.
 When in Doubt About Clutter, Psych Yourself Out
 Many home organization experts say "When in doubt, throw it out." Colorado psychotherapist and organizing consultant Aricia LaFrance isn't so strict. "It just slows you down and makes you hate organizing," she says. Instead, if you have something you don't wear or use, but are on the fence about parting with it, stick it in a box. Put the box in your garage or attic, and write a future date on it -- one year or six months from now. "If you really need something from that box, you can go out and get it," says LaFrance. "When the date comes -- and you need to write it in your calendar -- don't open the box. Donate it or throw it away."

Cool Ways to Beat the Heat

It has been a long week of extreme heat for Oklahoma. If you are running out of ideas to stay cool when the thermometer is reading 100 or greater, here are some fun ways to beat the heat.

When you can, lose the shoes. When we get hot, our feet tend to sweat, especially when we are wearing shoes without socks. Give your feet a rest and allow the air to cool your skin and the blood in your feet. As the blood vessels take that blood to other parts of your body, you will feel a greater sensation of coolness.

Cold Spritzer

Keep a spray bottle of water in the refrigerator and spray your face, arms, and legs when needed to help regulate your body temperature. Spraying your wrists can also help cool down the blood flowing throughout your body.

Keep the Water Handy

Did you know when you get dehydrated your body temperature rises? One of the best things you can do to help stay cool is to stay hydrated. Keep a bottle of water with you at all times.

You are more likely to reach for the water when you are thirsty rather than drinks you should avoid when it is hot (those with caffeine, alcohol, and too much sugar).

Fruit Smoothie

Either make one at home or treat yourself to a fruit smoothie from your favorite place. A fruit smoothie is a great way to cool down, while also getting the added hydration from fruit. Try replacing a meal or snack with a fruit smoothie and you will also feel better by eating light.

After being in and out of the heat all day, the last thing you probably feel like is cooking in the kitchen. So don't! Opt for no-cook meals that keep you and your kitchen cool in the heat. Here are some great "Cool Recipes for Hot Days" ideas from the Hillcrest Pinterest board.

Cold showers are a great way to help your body cool down when extreme heat sets in. There are also other health benefits

In New York and across the Northeast, family farmers are pioneering change in our farm and food system. This region has strong agricultural roots and offers fertile ground for new farmers and sustainable agriculture," said Farm Aid President Willie Nelson. "On the Farm Aid stage in September, we'll celebrate the hard work of family farmers and support their efforts to grow strong and healthy communities for all of us."

Farm Aid 2013 will feature Farm Aid board members Willie Nelson, John Mellencamp, Neil Young and Dave Matthews. Additional artists will be announced soon. The concert benefits and promotes Farm Aid's

Here in New York, we are continuing to grow our state's vibrant agricultural industry through initiatives such as the FreshConnect program, which provides more avenues like farmers markets to connect New Yorkers with fresh, affordable and locally grown food products. We are also making important investments in regional food distribution hubs and marketing efforts like Taste NY to promote New York-made agricultural products and niche industries such as yogurt and wine, beer and spirits. New York is committed to its farmers, and so I commend Farm Aid for their work in helping farmers all across the nation flourish." Cattle Handling

Cattle are relatively easy to halter train, and we recommend the use of a rope halter, available through farm supply stores or catalogs. By brushing your cattle and running your hands over their bodies and legs, you will accustom them to being haltered and touched, leading to less stressful handling in the future. Be careful when working around cattle. Although cattle are not usually aggressive, they are very strong and can injure you by their normal range of motion (such as swinging their head to the side to swat at flies). You should always be aware of where they are stepping so they don't accidentally crush your feet. Cattle can feel threatened when confined, and some do kick. Always be very aware of your location when around cattle, never getting between a frightened cow and a wall or gate. Generally, you will not need to use cattle chutes for restraint, and can use a gate instead. If you would like further information on handling, see our shelter website. One of the most important ways to keep yourself and your animals safe is to know each individual animal, and to know how they react in stressful situations. Cattle that have been through traumatic experiences can be harder to work with, and may require the assistance of a veterinarian or someone who is professionally trained to handle them.

Landscape Design

When planning your exterior décor you should be sure to keep in mind easy landscaping designs and photos that can help simplify your task. The outside design of your home is just as important as the interior décor. If planned properly, the front of house landscape can really increase the curb appeal of your property. Some of the best landscape and garden ideas include adorning your yard with trees and plants that require little maintenance. Incorporating plants that do not require watering or trimming every day will make it easier for you to maintain. Plants and shrubs that do not need frequent maintenance and cheap to buy while becoming a great addition to both your front and backyard landscape designs. Because there are many different types of trees and plants to choose from, photo galleries can be great resources to help you make a decision. Whether you have a lot of money to spend or very little, there are many options for cheap landscaping on a budget to help you design your dream home. When planning your exterior design and getting ready to build an outdoor structure, searching through photo galleries will give you an idea of trends others are doing in their yards and what you can plant in yours. While you are brainstorming about your yard, it is a good idea to consider simple landscape designs.

If you are not an outdoor fanatic, you may find it difficult to develop a plan for your yard. Many beautiful pictures of backyard landscaping ideas are online to inspire you to begin designing the perfect yard layout. Looking at these photos can help you decide upon the types of trees, shrubs, or flowers you wish to plant in your front or backyard. Planting landscaping trees outside your home can add shade as well as beauty to any space. You can even search for online landscaping pictures before and after to see the types of transformations that can take place by the simple addition of plants. In order to retain the easy upkeep of your garden, you will want to choose low maintenance landscaping plants. These types of plants can grow and prosper with little water and do not require trimming and other care. Some easy large or small yard ideas include planting bushes such as the plumbago ariculata or leocophyllum frutescens. These bushes are water conserving plants that do not require irrigation or frequent watering. Another easy outdoor design is to plant a flower garden in your yard. There are numerous types of flowers that you can choose from with a wide range of colors. You can visit your local nursery, hardware store or look on through photo galleries for great ideas for garden flower bed designs. Planting flowers in your yard can be an easy way to spruce it up and add some color. If you live in a warm climate tropical landscaping plants can be a great addition to your home. Orchids, begonias, and ferns are great examples of tropical plants that you can plant in your yard. If you don't have a fence, there are many landscape edging ideas that incorporate plants to create a wall around your home. Trees and shrubs are great plants to be used as a fence around your property to give your yard more privacy. An easy to use for seclusion are fast growing trees that will reach their maximum height within a few years. Some privacy fence ideas for backyard gardening include using Green Giant trees or holly bushes to create a wall. Both these plants grow rapidly and keep their dark green colors year round. Using plants as a privacy fence is one of many great outdoor living space that can be an easy solution to keep your yard secluded without the hassle of installing a wooden or metal fence. Having these as a lawn edging throughout your yard will create a natural fence that will keep noise out and block the view from the inside and out. Some new 2013 landscape design trends incorporate items other than plants into the yard, such as rocks and other stone. Hardscape design is where bricks or pavement is used as decoration in landscaping such as sidewalks, patios, or a front walkway. Other garden decorations that include adding a retaining wall to your exterior design. This is a brick or stone wall that can be the edging to a flower bed or added into hills to prevent erosion. A rock garden is also another way to incorporate stones into your landscaping plan. Landscaping rocks of all sizes can be placed in various areas of your yard. Small stones can be used as mulch in tree beds or under bushes as a decorative touch. You can also strategically place large rocks throughout your yard to add some ornamentation to your outdoors. Other rock garden ideas include creating Japanese style designs. This is where you place rocks strategically in your yard to promote relaxation and meditation. If you have a pool in your backyard there are some specific plants that can be used to add beauty to your space. Plants for landscape pool ideas include small clusters of flowers and trees throughout the yard. You will want to choose trees that do not easily shed leaves to prevent debris from building up in water. Holly trees are great for this because their leaves do not fall out and they keep their dark green color year round. Some other small garden ideas for around a pool are to place flower beds around your space. You will not want to place too many flowers close to the water because they will not be able to withstand the harsh

Type 1 diabetes vaccine shows promise in early study: researchers

(Reuters) - An early stage study suggests an experimental vaccine may be able to tame bits of the immune system that go haywire in people with type 1 diabetes, offering hope for a new way to delay or prevent the autoimmune disease, researchers said on Wednesday.

For more than four decades, scientists have tried different ways of manipulating the immune system to stop the destruction of insulin-producing cells that is responsible for type 1 diabetes. The disease affects as many as 3 million Americans.

Some prior attempts suppressed desirable parts of the immune system, leaving individuals vulnerable to infections and cancer. Several teams are now attempting more targeted approaches in an effort to delay or reverse type 1 diabetes.

Those with this form of diabetes currently must monitor their blood sugar and take insulin several times a day, but the treatment is risky - it can cause coma or death at any time and can lead to heart disease, nerve damage, blindness and kidney failure over time.

"What one really wants to do is tame or regulate the specific aspects of the immune system that have gone awry and leave the rest of the immune system intact," said Dr. Richard Insel, chief scientific officer of JDRF, formerly known as the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation.

In the latest effort, published on Wednesday in the journal

Science Translational Medicine, teams from Leiden University Medical Center in the Netherlands and Stanford University in California tested a vaccine genetically engineered to shut down only the immune system cells causing harm, while leaving the rest of the immune system intact.

"The idea here is to turn off just the rogue immune cells that are attacking the pancreas and killing the beta cells that secrete insulin," said Stanford Professor Dr. Lawrence Steinman, one of the study's senior authors and co-founder of a company called Tolerion recently formed to commercialize the vaccine.

The study, done in 80 people diagnosed with type 1 diabetes who were receiving insulin injections, was designed to test the safety of the vaccine known as TOL-3021. The so-called DNA vaccine is made up of a small round piece of DNA called a plasmid that is genetically engineered to tamp down the immune response to insulin and preserve insulin-producing beta cells.

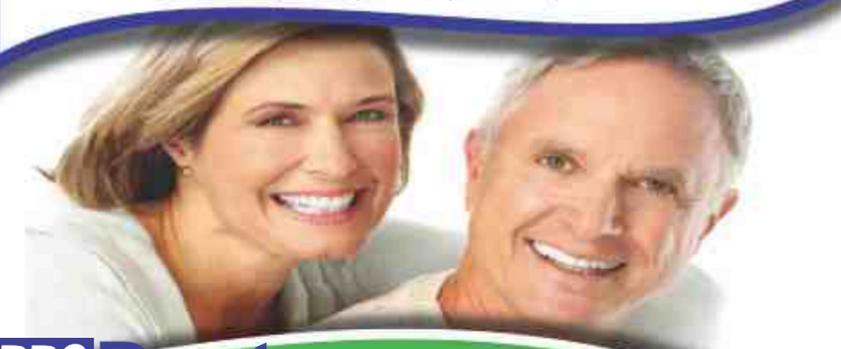

The vaccine targets a precursor protein in the blood called proinsulin. "It's a complicated series of snips and cuts in the DNA that take away the capability to stimulate the immune system," Steinman said.

"This effectively triggers an off-switch," he said.

After 12 weeks of shots given once a week, patients who got the vaccine showed signs that they helped preserve some of the remaining insulin-producing beta cells in the pancreas without causing serious side effects.

The vaccine also reduced the number of killer immune cells known as T cells. And patients who got the active vaccine had higher levels of C-peptides - a remnant of insulin production in the blood that suggests the presence of more working beta cells.

Steinman admits the vaccine is far from commercial use, but the study is promising enough to do a bigger study. "So far, it looks like it is doing what we want," he said.

Insel said it was too early to say much about the vaccine's promise. "It looks like it has some potential, but very small numbers," he said.

OIL & GAS

A Look inside Today's Industry

OILFIELD EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES - SUPPLIES & SERVICES - INDUSTRY NEWS

Rosneft, ExxonMobil Achieve Milestones in Strategic Cooperation

Rosneft and ExxonMobil announced the achievement of several milestones under their 2011 Strategic Cooperation Agreement, including joint venture formation for the Kara Sea and Black Sea projects, and establishing foundations for joint ventures to explore seven other licenses in the Russian Arctic and to manage the joint West Siberia tight oil project. The companies have also agreed to move to the next

Far East. The Black Sea and Kara Sea joint venture operating companies, Tuapsemorneftegaz SARL and Karmorneftegaz SARL respectively, will commence project implementation activities as operator pursuant to agreement with Rosneft, which is the license holder. Rosneft holds 66.67 percent interest and ExxonMobil holds 33.33 percent interest in the two projects.

The initial cost of exploration in the two areas is estimated at more than $3.2 billion, the majority of which will be financed by ExxonMobil. In 2013 collection of data for both regions will continue until the commencement of drilling operations in the Kara and Black seas in 2014. In February, ExxonMobil and Rosneft announced plans to increase the scope of their strategic cooperation by adding seven new blocks in the Russian Arctic in the Chukchi Sea, Laptev Sea and Kara Sea, spanning approximately 231,661 square miles. Rosneft and ExxonMobil have entered into agreements that lay the foundation for joint venture entities for these areas. Data acquisition is being planned for these blocks, which represent some of the most promising and least explored offshore areas globally. The license obligations stipulate that 14 exploration and appraisal wells will be drilled and a significant amount of 2D and 3D seismic will be conducted over the next 10 years. Agreements are also now in place establishing the foundation for a new joint venture for a tight oil pilot project in West Siberia, where data collection operations are currently underway. Rosneft will hold 51 percent interest and ExxonMobil will hold 49 percent interest in this project.

Also in place is an agreement identifying further steps for the development of an LNG plant in the Russian Far East. Following the agreement, by the end of 2013 the parties will undertake work to determine an LNG plant site, gas liquefaction technologies and commercial structure of the project. Once this work is finalized, the parties plan to progress engineering definition. Agreements were signed at the St. Petersburg International Economic Forum by Igor I. Sechin, Rosneft president and chairman of the Management Board, and Rex W. Tillerson, chairman and CEO of Exxon Mobil Corporation. Commenting on the agreements signed, Igor Sechin said, "I am glad to note the activities outlined in the Strategic Cooperation Agreement are being implemented ahead of schedule.

I would like to thank the teams from both companies for their hard and coordinated work. Our cooperation touches upon the most promising aspects of today's oil and gas industry: Arctic shelf and deep water areas in the Black Sea covering a total area of 298,457 square miles, tight oil in West Siberia as well as a promising LNG project in the Russian Far East. We are convinced that implementation of all these projects will benefit both companies' shareholders. We believe it will also boost the development of the Russian oil and gas industry and will have a multiplying effect on related industries, already creating market demand for equipment, knowledge and technologies."

This is for Sound off. If you want to watch fireworks they are on sale at this very moment every where you look. Go buy some and then you can light them yourself. Dont rely on someone else to foot the bill for your entertainment. The last time I checked, Wal-Mart still sells swimming pools of all sizes, buy one, put it in your back yard, pay for your own chemicals and then you wont have to wait on anyone else to get one ready. All this bickering back and forth doesn't fix anything. If everyone that sits back and talks about how things should be done would get up and help the community, then we could all enjoy things in a more civil matter. Running a City is no easy task. Decisions are very hard to make sometimes. If someone thinks they can do a better job, maybe they should run for office.

Crucifying Paula Deen over a racist remark made over a decade ago is beyond absurd. It was a different era. If she said it today, that would be different. Next the politically correct will want to strip William Faulkner of his Nobel Prize.

Would the person who removed my 74-year-old mother's purse from the women's restroom on the first floor, please turn the purse in at the front desk. No questions asked. Reward.

The subprime market wiped out 40 percent of the world's wealth. The following is how one journalist viewed the aftermath of the subprime scam. "While 9/11 prompted the U.S. government to tear up half the Constitution in the name of public safety, after 2008, the authorities went in the other direction. If you can imagine a post 9/11 scenario where there were no metal detectors at airports and people could walk on carrying chain saws and meat cleavers, you get a rough idea of what was done to reform the rating agencies." Shh! Don't tell anyone.

This is to my neighbor who doesn't like the mosquito sprayer. I, for one, appreciate them. We would have the West Nile virus running everywhere if it wasn't for them. And people who have low immune systems, children, elderly, and people fighting arthritis, cancer, and other diseases would be in a world of hurt. That's why they spray at night, most people are indoors. When you hear them coming, bring yourself and pets indoors. Thank you mosquito man. I appreciate you.

I read with a heavy heart every time someone wants to blame their situation on a political party. I too was raised in poverty. I saw mom physically ill from the lack of sleep from the three jobs she worked in a 24-hour period. She refused to apply for any government assistance. She claimed that it made one too dependent on that resource. I learned I needed to do better. I educated myself and pulled myself out of mom's situation. I was finally able to care for her. If you have to climb a ladder, you must want to take the first step and have the ambition and strength to reach the top.

What makes smokers think they have the right to toss out their cigarette butts anywhere they please? This is littering. I was so infuriated at a woman who just lit her cigarette while pulling into the parking lot on Courthouse Road, took a few puffs as she exited her car and tossed the still burning cigarette down on the sidewalk just before she entered the building. She should learn some common sense, courtesy and safety precautions. Smokers are not exempt from the law.

I just want to say thank you to Evelyn Davis and her husband. I had lost my wallet and they found my wallet and returned it in tact. It nice to know there are good people around here and people like this left in the world.

I was wondering if anyone could tell me more about the progress on the Okla Theater? I had read in the Journal a while back about the progress but nothing else has been spoken about it. I would like to know more.

We despise the "mosquito fog" trucks. We have no idea what toxic junk is in that government spray (is it why the honey bees are dying?), and we don't want us or our pets to breathe it, much less the poor birds, squirrels and other animals. And we don't want to be forced indoors on our property just because that darned truck goes by.

I learned something today. I called the Oak Hill cemetery maintenance the other day and asked them if they could do something in the Catholic part of the cemetery, and was advised that they do not take care of the Catholic section of the Oak Hill Cemetery. If you have any needs in that section, you have to call someone with the Nights of Columbus. It was made clear not to call the city, they are not responsible. They are not responsible for the Masonic section, but they do take care of it. I was really surprised, I didn't know this, and I am sure some of the readers did not know about this either. Just thought people would like to know.

WHERE DID THAT FOOD COME FROM?

What did one flag say to the other flag? Nothing. It just waved. That one just cracks me up. Hey -- I never said I was hard to entertain. But with our own American flag on my mind this week, I've naturally begun to think about food. Who could think about our national heritage and independence without also focusing on the celebrations? What is Americana without a smorgasbord on a checkered blanket under a sky full of rocket's red glare? Lets round up all the regular suspects and see just how American our Independence Day meal is. Talk about diversity in a picnic basket. Just take a look.
Hot Dogs - originated at a 1901 baseball game in New York. Vendors called them Dachshund Sausages until a prudent sportswriter simplified it to Hot Dogs. Good choice. - USA
Fried Chicken - while many people associate this with southern states, this delicacy was actually introduced by Scottish immigrants who settled there. Sorry KFC, the winner is - Scotland.
Baked Beans - believed to be based on a Native American dish cooking beans with fat and maple syrup. European settlers adapted the recipe by using pork and molasses. My grandmother perfected it, but the nod goes to - Native Americans.
Deviled Eggs - Food experts say the practice of boiling, removing yolks, mixing them with spices and refilling the eggs became common in the 16th century and originated in Rome. Probably right after Easter. - Italy.
Potato Salad - first created by Spanish explorers in the 16th century. German immigrants brought a recipe that is the most immediate ancestor to the mayo-based dish most of us know and love. However, mayonnaise was developed in France and not available until the 1900's. - true melting pot effort by Spain, France and Germany.
Watermelon - cultivated in India as far back as 2500 B.C. but native to - Africa.
Dessert - the most iconic is the cake using strawberries and blueberries on a bed of white frosting to create an image of the American Flag. I'm pretty sure this one belongs to Betty Crocker. And isn't that fitting? - Corporate America
Oh well. We're not perfect, but we're still the land of the free and the home of the brave. Happy 4th of July everyone!

Lawn Irrigation Tips

With the long range weather forecast calling for drier than normal weather over the next three months, irrigation will become a major issue for those well managed Bermuda grass lawns. The thumb rule for irrigation of lawns is 1" of water per week, either in the form of rain or an irrigation system. Homeowners often wonder how long they should irrigate their lawn to get that good inch of water. One can estimate how much irrigation water is applied to their lawn over time by following a few simple steps.

1. Purchase a few short, plastic rain gauges from a local lawn and garden retail store.
2. Strategically place the rain gauges approximately at turfgrass mowing height throughout the irrigated turfgrass areas in the lawn.

3. Early in the morning, irrigate the lawn for exactly 20 minutes on a relatively non-windy day.

4. After irrigating for 20 minutes, measure the volume of water in each rain gauge and calculate the average volume over 20 minutes, then multiply by 3 to calculate the average volume over one hour.

5. Move the rain gauges to different areas/zones of the lawn and repeat the process as needed.

6. After completing this process, you will have a very good estimate of average irrigation output in inches per hour for your lawn.

This simple procedure

Cattle Physiology

The average life span for cattle is 18 to 22 years, though they can live in excess of 25 years. However, Sanctuary animals who have come from abusive factory farm conditions consequently may have more health problems and a shorter life span.

On average, adult male breeds of cattle, such as Angus, Jersey and Hereford (bulls if un-castrated; steers if castrated), weigh between 1,200 and 1,800 pounds. Larger breeds, such as Brahman, Brangus, Charolais, and Holstein males, can actually weigh 2,000 to 2,800 pounds. Adult females (cows) weigh between 1,100 and 1,500 pounds, but larger breeds like Charolais can weigh closer to 2,000 pounds. The normal body temperature for cattle is between 101° F and 102° F.

may save you money and can help to conserve water resources during drought periods such as those we have experienced in late 2011 and the summer of 2012. For more information on growing and managing turfgrass, contact your local OSU Extension Office.

Drop, take cover and hold on in case of an earthquake

If you had told me 20 years ago that I would be publishing an article about earthquake safety while living in the heart of Southeast Oklahoma, I would have questions how much of the choc

beer you had been hitting lately. Be that as it may, we are having a great deal more earthquake activity than ever before. When the ground starts rumbling under your feet, it can be unsettling, at the very least, or out right scary, depending on the strength of the tremors. But, knowing what to do can calm fears and boost your chances of remaining safe through the natural disaster. According to the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA), research shows most earthquake related injuries and deaths occur when people try to move around inside buildings or attempt to leave a building before the shaking stops. This is a good example of how being aware of what to do in this type of emergency could save your life.

In fact, if you are indoors, you should keep movement to a minimum while trying to get to safety. In fact, you should remember to drop, cover and hold on. Drop to the ground, take cover under a sturdy piece of furniture such as a table or desk and hold on until the shaking stops. If no cover is readily available, protect your face and head with your arms and crouch in an inside corner of a room. If an earthquake strikes while you are in bed, stay there – and use the pillow to cover your face and head. As a precaution, you may even consider relocating any heavy light fixtures, picture frames, mirrors or other objects above your bed that could fall in the event tremors occur. It is important to rely on doorways for protection only if they are nearby, strongly supported and a load bearing entry. For instance, many interior doorways are not built sturdily, and provide poor covering in the event of an earthquake. Stay inside until the shaking stops. It isn't the ground movement that gets people in these types of situations, it's the falling walls and flying objects and debris. Staying put is still recommended if you are outside when an earthquake strikes. Try to get out in the open, away from buildings, streetlights, utility wires and poles, and stay there until the event passes. If you happen to be driving at the time, stop as soon as you can, but away from buildings, trees or overpasses. Remain in the car until the tremors stop. Once it is safe to proceed, be careful of roads, bridges and ramps that may have been damaged. In spite of your best efforts, if you become trapped by debris, cover your mouth with a piece of clothing or handkerchief, and remain as still as possible to avoid stirring up dust or disturbing the debris pile. To alert rescue workers of your location, tap on a pipe or wall. Shout only as a last resort because it can cause you to inhale dust. For more information on earthquake safety, www.ready.gov.

HEALTH CHALLENGE WEEK 26

Money. What does that have to do with good health? It can have a big impact on your physical health, especially during tough economic times like we are experiencing right now. Worry and stress can take their toll on the nervous system, mental faculties, blood pressure and hormonal levels. Being aware of your money can be the first step in feeling some control of your financial health, and that leads to an improvement in your overall health.

Do you know how much money you have in your checking account? Do you balance your checkbook on a regular basis? Do you write down every ATM cash withdrawal? Most people would answer "no" to these three questions. But if you aren't aware of the money at your disposal, how can you effectively manage it? Putting yourself on a budget is a great idea, but you have to stick with it in order for it to work. Try the following tip to start thinking about how you can manage your money instead of your money managing you.

Know where your money goes. Keep a log for one week that shows you exactly where you spend money, and how much you spend. This is the first step in developing awareness about your finances. Throughout July, we will talk about other ways you can benefit from positive financial health.

Holiday Lake Safety

Ahh... the lure of the lake... its sparkling blue water... the refreshing coolness as it splashes over your skin on a hot summer's day. There's nothing quite like it, and with so many ways in which to enjoy spending time there, it's no wonder millions flock to their local lakes each year.

While the desire for fun and relaxation may be everyone's draw to the lake, it's important that sun and water safety be first and foremost on every lake lover's mind. With so many types of lake activities, there are equally just as many ways that accidents can occur. The following safety tips will help to ensure that you and your loved ones have positive lake memories and not negative or even tragic ones.

1.) Sun Protection - It may sound simple, but nothing ruins a day at the lake like a painful sunburn, and with incidents of skin cancer ever rising sun protection should not be taken lightly. To help prevent sunburns, sun damage, premature aging, and skin cancer, you and your family should not rely on sunscreen alone. Choose a good quality waterproof sunscreen with an SPF of 15 or higher. Reapply it every two hours as recommended on the label and after swimming, sweating, or drying off with a towel.

Wear a lightweight shirt with sleeves, a wide brimmed hat, and sunglasses for further protection. Even the eyes and scalp can get sun burnt. Drink plenty of water to avoid dehydration. Your body will not stay hydrated just by being in the water. Furthermore, avoid the sun if at all possible between the hours of 10 am and 4 pm, when the harmful effects of the sun are strongest.

2.) Swim Safely - Learn to swim and ensure that all of your family members know how to swim. If you or your loved ones don't know how to swim, contact your local American Red Cross chapter and enroll in a swim course. Choose a clean, well-maintained, supervised area. An area with a lifeguard is even better. Any swimmer, even good ones, can have an unexpected emergency in the water. Never swim alone. Stay clear of areas with murky water, drop-offs, and underwater plant life as these can be dangerous. Avoid diving. Enter the water feet first. It's much safer.

3.) Boating and Personal Watercraft - An outing on a boat or the use of personal watercraft such as jet skis can be very rewarding. They can also be very dangerous if basic safety rules aren't followed. Before operating any boat or watercraft, make sure you know your local laws and regulations on operating them and obey them. The driver and any others on board should wear coast guard-approved life jackets that are in good repair.

Be extremely cautious around swimmers, other boats and watercraft, and others in the water. Operate at a low speed until you are in the open water away from swimming areas and docks. No horseplay! Do not pass close to other boats or watercraft and do not jump wakes. Not only is this behavior dangerous, it is usually illegal.

In addition to the guidelines set forth above, never mix swimming or boat/watercraft operation with the use of alcohol. A little common sense along with the desire to keep yourself and your family safe will go a long way to ensuring your lake activities create pleasant memories you'll cherish for a lifetime.

Jacob addresses the man behind the counter: Jacob and Rebecca are getting married. Jacob: "Are you the owner?" The pharmacist answers, "Yes". Jacob: "Do you sell heart medication?" Pharmacist: "Of course, we do." Jacob: "How about medicine for circulation?" Pharmacist: "All kinds." Jacob: "Medicine for rheumatism, scoliosis?" Pharmacist: "Definitely." A woman came home to find her husband in the kitchen shaking frantically, almost in a dancing frenzy, with some kind of wire running from his waist towards the electric kettle. Intending to jolt him away from the deadly current, she whacked him with a handy plank of wood, breaking his arm in two places. Up to that moment, he had been happily listening to his Walkman.
